COVID IN THE SOUTHERN CONE:
HISTORICAL AND ANTHROPOLOGICAL PERSPECTIVES

A ZOOM ROUND TABLE ON THE CRISIS IN BRAZIL, ARGENTINA AND CHILE

Thursday, July 9, 2020, 17:30 GMT (London)

INSTITUTE OF LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES
LAGLOBAL SEMINAR

Latin America continues to be a flash point in the global Covid-19 crisis. What are the underlying causes and consequences of the COVID-induced crises in the Southern Cone? What historical, political and cultural dimensions have shaped responses to the pandemia in each country and region?

In this roundtable, historians and anthropologists based in the Southern Cone will present and discuss historical and anthropological dimensions of the crisis in Brazil, Argentina and Chile.

Mark Thurner is Professor of Latin American Studies, Institute of Latin American Studies (ILAS), University of London, and Distinguished Professor of Anthropology, History and the Humanities at The Latin American Social Science Faculty (FLACSO) in Quito, Ecuador.

Marcos Cueto is Professor of the History of Medicine at the Casa de Oswaldo Cruz, FIOCRUZ, Rio de Janeiro.

Irina Podgorny is Professor of the History of Science at the Museo de la Plata and CONICET, Argentina.

Mercedes Prieto is Emeritus Professor of Anthropology at FLACSO, Quito, Ecuador.